With the launch of the Tangram collection and the expressive Nuance finish, Cesar introduces a new era of kitchen design that blends modularity and sensibility

Renowned Italian kitchen design brand Cesar has embarked on an unprecedented journey this year with the debut of the new Tangram collection. Marrying the elegance of curves with the exquisite creativity embedded in a series of new finishes, Tangram redefines the essence of contemporary kitchen design.

At the heart of the brand's lineup of finishes for the Tangram collection lies Nuance, a playful series characterised by an abstract visual language, culminating in the portrayal of experimental hues on glass. Gracefully artistic, Nuance elevates the Tangram collection to new heights of aesthetic and functional excellence.

ABOVE The 50's system and the Tangram kitchen island

Inspired by the ancient Chinese puzzle game of the same name, Tangram brings a unique blend of modular composition and fluid design to kitchen spaces.

The collection features five curved elements that can be effortlessly combined with straight components, celebrating curves and their infinite combinations, and allowing the creation of kitchen islands with unconventional shapes, wall compositions, and even solutions that elegantly wrap around corners.

Embedded in the island is the Groove cabinet door, adding further depth and texture to the Tangram collection with a play of light and shadow. This feature is characterised by a series of three-dimensional vertical grooves that form an irregular pattern and hide the joints between modules, ensuring a seamless look, and contributing to the collection's overall sense of exploration and sinuosity.
